North Pond Bird Walks
in cooperation with Chicago Ornithological Society and
Peggy Notebaert Nature Museum

Nearly 350 kinds of birds have visited Chicago's Lincoln Park, one of the region's best places to see birds. Join Geoff Williamson and other experienced bird watchers from Third Coast Birding on weekly bird walks around North Pond to observe and learn about Chicago's birdlife. Each week brings a different assortment of birds to view.

All walks take place on Wednesday mornings starting at 7:00a.m. The group meets by the Peggy Notebaert Nature Museum at the southeast corner of North Pond (2430 N. Cannon Dr.), usually on the casting pier at the south end of the pond, but sometimes between there and the museum lobby. The walks last for about two hours, but participants can readily leave before the end if they need to. Dress for the weather and bring binoculars.

PREREGISTRATION IS REQUIRED!
